Dear Mr. Kelso:

After all this delay, you've undoubtedly concluded that you wasted a great deal of time one evening last August in talking with me. The purpose of this letter is to assure you that this is not so.

I'm thoroughly impressed with your approach to what I have regarded as a very serious problem for a long time. I have studied your writings very intently and am fully convinced that you have the best solution I am aware of to these problems.

I am presently attempting to convince the Secretary that your approach will work on some of the problems facing the Department. As you know, things go very slowly in government, and to this point, I don't have any progress to report. I can report that I shall continue to pursue your ideas as long as I think there's any chance for selling them.

I am also very interested in the application of these ideas to international affairs. I have discussed these with colleagues in the business world and they, too, are impressed with the ideas. Indeed, they are developing the application of your theory to a couple of specific projects and will undoubtedly be contacting you in the near future.

I sincerely appreciate your patience in communicating your very exciting ideas to me. I hope it will be my pleasure to meet with you again soon.

Sincerely,

Donald D. Dunlop
Assistant and Science Adviser to the Secretary
